Tenisha Kinney, also known as “Nisha K. (#IAmNishaK)” is a single mother of three daughters and founder of the LEO Resource Network with a very diverse background in many areas. She was born and raised in the city of New Orleans, LA up until the age of 10. Her mother Wanda Kinney relocated their family to Colorado to provide their family with a better way of life. However, in July of 2015 Tenisha while 6 months pregnant with her third daughter made the drastic decision to relocate back home to Louisiana due to a domestic situation and leave her family, friends, and employer of almost 9 years. Along this new journey to start over, Tenisha was presented with several different challenges, ranging from building relationships, spotty employment, lack of resources, poor credit/ money management, in addition to her oldest daughter being diagnosed with ADHD and ASD along with an unstable living situation that lead to her and her daughters living in a shelter and out of hotels. Tenisha’s experiences have forced her to seek out alternative solutions to overcoming these challenges, which resulted in her founding the LEO Resource Network. The LEO Resource Network was created to share helpful information about opportunities and connect individuals with resources throughout the state of Louisiana. To take it a step further Tenisha has developed a new-found passion for financial literacy and uses her social media platform to educate and empower families through discussion around topics such as establishing an emergency fund, debt elimination, credit repair and the benefits of starting a home-based business.

Take care of your skin to show the inner beauty outward.

Start Fresh

A new year and a new season automatically bring about a change. There's something about the calendar restarting at one and the season resetting to bring about a change of scenery. For some, it's a birthday that resets the clock. Whatever the re-start point is, we should always be thankful that it is a chance to start fresh. All the things unaccomplished before that date no longer matter. Now is your chance to be the best version of yourself. So let's start with some basics...

Beautiful Inside Out

Beauty starts from within but let's face it, sometimes if you don't feel great inside you can dress up the outside and get an instant confidence boost. As a rising queen, the goal is to get you to radiate the beauty you were created with from the inside out. However, it's okay to work on the outside and the inside at the same time. So don't forget to read the other fabulous articles in this issue to gain some TLC for your soul. Because we are going to focus on the inside (this

An extra step I like to take is getting a facial by a professional. Just like people brush their teeth everyday but visit the dentist twice a year for a thorough cleaning to get the spots they could not efficiently clean on their own. A facial is similar maintenance. The esthetician can closely examine your skin, give a true assessment of your skin-type, and suggest products to help your skin look its best. Make a commitment to yourself to visit a professional at least once a year. The confidence you will gain from your session will be invaluable.

Queen Skincare Gems

The ultimate goal is to radiate the beauty from within. There is no better way to do this then to allow your skin to be the radiant entity it was designed to be. Having a good skincare routine is the first step to a better outside you. People will immediately notice something different and see you differently as a result. As a result, you will also slowly notice an increase in your confidence. Another benefit is that you end up using less makeup. The better your skin the less you have to correct and cover it with makeup. More importantly, the better you look the better you feel. The better you feel the higher you hold can hold your head up to wear the crown and be the Queen you were created to be.

Definition of A Queen

QRTM: How would you define yourself? If we looked you up in the dictionary what would it say?

TERIECE CHERELL: When I first saw this question, I was like Wow, this is a good question. But how would I define myself without seeming like I'm tooting my own horn. Yet as I thought about it, it became clear that I am who I am. So I define myself as a God-fearing, strong, ambitious, confident, free spirited, passionate, humble, loyal, loving, hardworking, talented, generous, inspiring, empowering, motivated woman. I'm just a genuine, sincere, honest person who wants to help others and see them succeed and I try to give my best in all that I do. I want to make some type of difference in the lives of others and know that my efforts to do that meant something to someone. To sum it up in 3 words: Living, Learning, Loving, Embracing Life and all that it has to offer.

I went a step further and asked a few friends, family members, and coworkers to also describe me and this is what the survey said: God-fearing, positive, inspiring, loving, faithful, dedicated, loyal, positive, happy, focused, fearless (bold), compassionate, thoughtful, trustworthy, grounded, helpful, eager, understanding, kind. A few stuck out to me as they were mentioned several times: God-fearing, intelligent, considerate, spiritual, confident, inspiring, trustworthy, loving, kind hearted, and honestly this brought tears to my eyes. If you looked me up in the dictionary, it would say Teriece, A phenomenal God-fearing woman with class, self-aware, sophistication, distinction, lover of people, good hearted, phenomenal, courageous, vibrant, compassionate, caring,

QRTM-

What stigmas and pre perceptions have you experienced as a woman.

How have those variables affected you personally and spiritually?

TERIECE CHERELL:

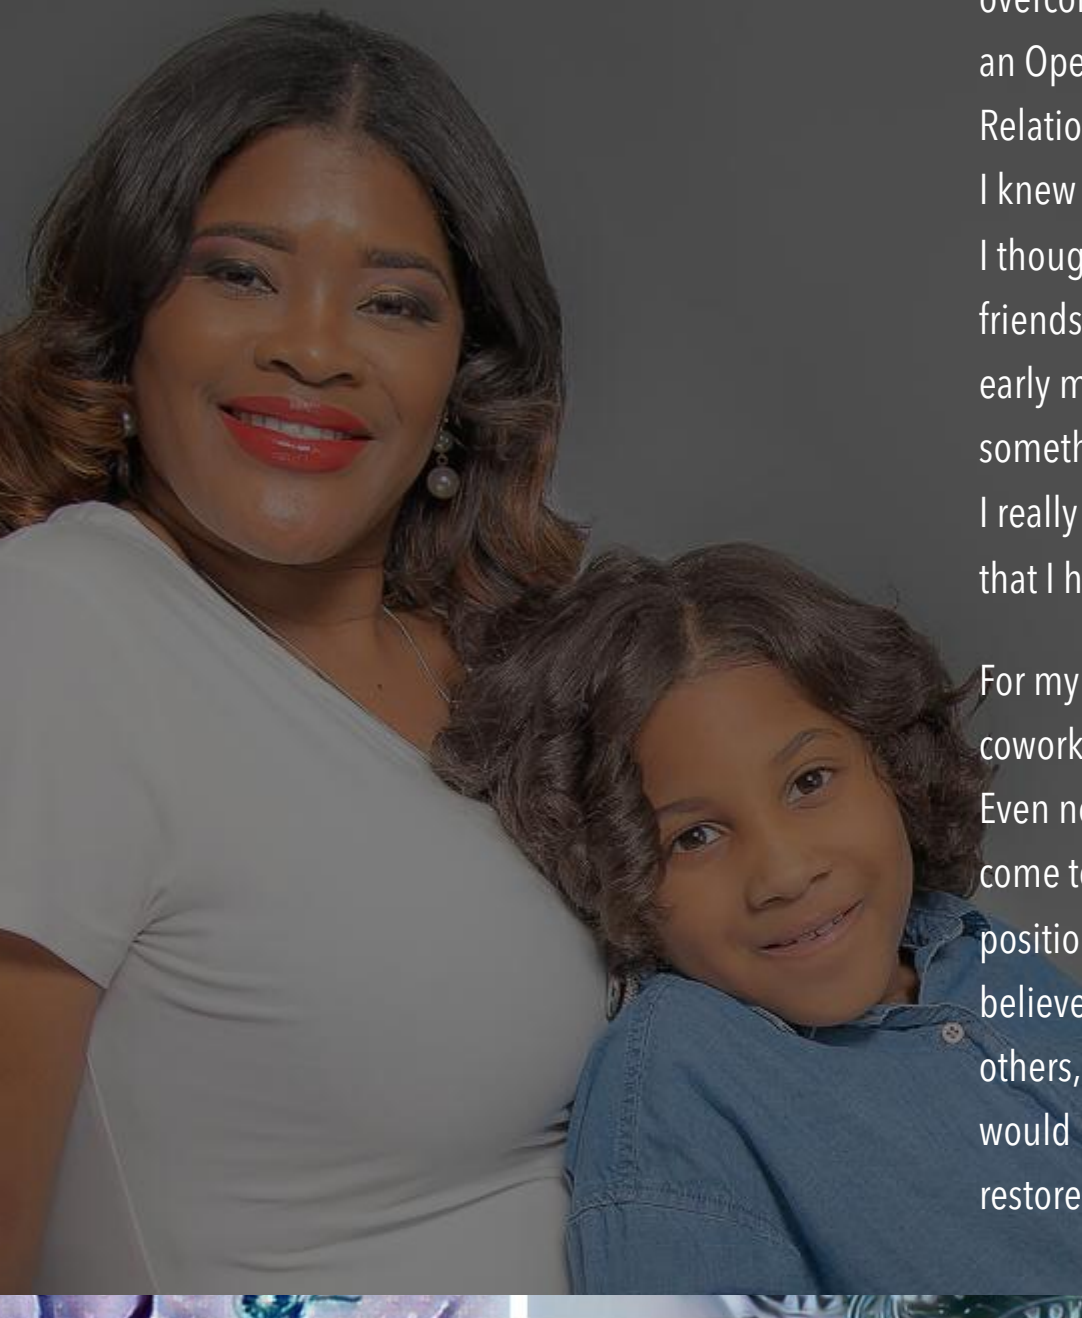

I cant say that I have experienced any personal stigmas and pre pre perceptions except those that a regular black woman would face. My intelligence, talent, and hard work ethic may have been overlooked as a woman or even as an intelligent educated Black woman. I can recall a time when I was passed up for a promotion and I was definitely more qualified than the young male counterpart who received the promotion. Whether it was because I am a woman or black woman, I cant really say but that did open my eyes to the fact that there is still some sexism, racism, and prejudice in the world no matter how far we may have come.

I know who I am and I know whose I am. My strong faith in God, myself and my abilities to do whatever I put my mind too. Philippians 4:13 states I can do ALL things through Christ who strengthens me. Although I have faults, flaws and failures like other human beings, I know that I am fearfully and wonderfully made in God's image and likeness. I am good enough strong enough, bold enough, talented enough, and beautiful enough and that the world should know it. I do not allow the world to define who and how I should be, I look to God's word, I try to think rationally and I allow Him to be my guide along this journey called life.

QRTM: What defining moment happened in your life that helped you to overcome those stigmas and pre perceptions.

TERIECE CHERELL:

I would have to say that The defining moment that helped to overcome those stigma was when 1st book, Live, Learn, Love: With an Open Heart Life Lessons on Cultivating Healthy and Meaningful Relationships was released on December 16, 2018. At that moment I knew that everything I worked for, thought, dreamed was possible, I thought of all the sacrifices made during that process. Family and friends lost and gained, relationships began and ended, late nights, early mornings, moments when I felt like giving up, doing something else more seemingly attainable, and then I realized who I really was. I had confirmation from several people and then I knew that I had to keep pushing, I wasn't raised that way.

For my 1st book event, the love and support from family, friends, coworkers, associates, church family classmates was overwhelming. Even now when I think back to a few months ago, I get full and tears come to my eyes. That was a true testament of God's presence, position and purpose for my life. Whether it was because they believed in me, what God was doing in my life, how it could affect others, or just came out to see what was going on, I knew that lives would be touched, changed and broken relationships would be restored, and mended.

5 Crystals to Break Out When They Got You F*!@ed Up

Do you know what it feels like for someone to have you f&@ked up? That feeling when a person who doesn't know you or your story, judges you in half a millisecond? We have all been the victims of someone's misconceptions. But sometimes, when this happens on a larger scale within a society, a harmful and discriminatory stigma against a particular group of people may form.

The harmful effects of stigma are well documented. Individuals and groups who are stigmatized by their communities experience discrimination in housing, medical care, education and financial opportunity. This is a real thing with real consequences. It isn't something that can be changed through the power of self-affirmation or positive thinking, but it is possible to protect yourself from the harmful mental effects of being stigmatized with the use of crystals.

When you gaze into a crystal, you are unlocking a field of live energy. Each crystal has its very own special energy force, with powerful properties for healing, protection, cleansing and more. Meditate with these crystals and envision a protective force field of energy around you. Keep them with you throughout your day to keep that energy force field strong.

Chialstolite

Another powerful protection stone, chialstolite was used in ancient times to ward off ill wishes and curses. It also dispels illusions, helping people to accept reality.

What About the Children?

In the wake of Hurricane Katrina, privatization crept into the city under the guise of “school choice” aimed at resuscitating the infrastructure of public education. According to the National Education Association (NEA), privatization, or “contracting out,” is part of a broad campaign that seeks to transfer many parts of community life, including the delivery of education services, into the hands of private, for-profit corporations. In the city of New Orleans, privatization masked as school choice gave birth to the current 100% charter landscape, which ultimately decimated neighborhood schools. Former education secretary Arne Duncan once said that Hurricane Katrina was the “best thing” that ever happened to education in the city of New Orleans. Although he later apologized, I’d like Mr. Duncan to elaborate on what he meant by “best thing” considering many of our children, specifically Black children, are being bussed across the city to failing schools. I’m sure he meant, Hurricane Katrina was the “best thing” that ever happened to “for profit” education.

In the spirit of transparency, charter advocates would argue that the intent behind school choice was good at its inception, however, I'd kindly remind them that the road to hell was paved with the best of intentions. On the surface, school choice offers the impression that parents get to choose the school of their choice. Realistically, parents get to create a list of up to eight (8) schools through a centralized system known as OneApp, with the hope of getting one (1) of their top selections. The only choice parents have in the OneApp process is the listing of the schools. The real choice is left to the algorithm used to place children in the available seats. Thanks to privatization, OneApp and faux school choice, parents are at the mercy of a system that is more about chance and less about choice. Thanks to privatization, many of the city's most vulnerable children are shuffled from one low performing, under-resourced school to another.

Until the system works on behalf of those that need it the most, we must continue to advocate for the "least of us." The failure or success of school choice rests with the most vulnerable demographics. School choice should transcend race, class, and socioeconomic status. Until every school becomes a school of choice, school choice is simply the vehicle for which privatizers will ride into our city to profit on the backs of our children. Whether the argument is for or against privatization in the form of charter schools, we must ask ourselves: WHAT ABOUT THE CHILDREN?

SPECIAL NOTE FOR SENSITIVE SKIN

Managing sensitive skin can be challenging, as it takes considerable time and effort to determine which ingredients cause inflammation and irritation. To make this process easier, introduce only one new formula or product at a time. This rule applies to both skincare and cosmetics. Patch testing a new formula on your inner forearm is an excellent way to minimize potential reactions on the face. If your skin shows no sign of flaring up, apply the formula to the area behind one of your ears before using it on your face. Look for labels that identify formulas as non-irritating and non-sensitizing and free of parabens, synthetic fragrances, mineral oil, sulfate

FINANCIAL ABUNDANCE IS ON THE WAY

In this country, over 80% of Americans have a less than 750 credit score. Out of the 80%, 63 million American have less than a 599 credit score. As a country, we have not been set up to understand the meaning of credit and how it can impact your life.

In order to ensure that your understand credit, let's start from the beginning: What is your Credit Score and How Is Your Credit Score Calculated?

A credit score is a number that reflects your risk level, as an individual, to a lender. The higher the number, the lower the risk will be to the lender. As you apply for increased credit or attempt to make a purchase, the lender will check your ability to pay back that loan. The more negative marks you have on your credit report, the less likely you will be granted the loan or purchase you requested.

Mrs. Shakita Stewart

Instagram
@sjs_comprehensive_llc

Hustle WITHOUT COMPROMISING Your Crown

Now let's break down how our credit score is calculated:

The formula used to calculate your credit score includes information based on several factors:

- 35% on your payment history-This means, you must pay your bill on time. Once you are 31 days late, your credit score will be impacted.
- 30% on the amount you currently owe lenders-This means, if you have a credit card you should only use 30% or less of the credit limit on the credit card. For example, if you have a credit card with a $300 credit limit, you want to use no more than $100 on that card. Also, when making your credit card payment, be sure to wait until your bill has been generated. This will show that you used a certain percentage then paid it back as you agreed.
- 15% on the length of your credit history-This means, the longer you have had the account open, the better. Just like a bottle of wine: as the wine ages the taste enhances. You NEVER want to close an old account.
- 10% on the number of new credit accounts you've opened or applied for (fewer is better)-This means DO NOT apply for credit unless you absolutely need it. The more inquiries you have on your credit, your credit score is impacted.
- 10% on the mix of credit accounts you have (mortgages, credit cards, installment loans, etc.)-This means your types of credit you have open should vary. It's okay to have a mortgage and credit card open at the same time. It shows the credit bureaus that you are trustworthy with various trade lines of credit.
